

The idea of a company requiring their local stations to air a one-sided, discredited piece about the one candidate without providing their viewers a second film critical of the other candidate is an abuse of ownership principles of public interest - the basis for license allocation.